What It Was Like To Drive To The Hamptons Years Ago

By Dan Rattiner

This year is the 45th year I have run this newspaper. People have come to me and congratulated me on that achievement. Then they ask me to tell them what it was really like out here all those years ago. And how did we get out here without the Long Island Expressway and Sunrise to take us.

Well, instead of telling this to all different people over and over again, I thought it would be a good idea, geezer fashion, to just tell it once, here in these pages, and then for anyone in the future who asks me I can just refer them to this article. It would save a lot of time and I wouldn't have to be repeating myself.

First of all, to start your journey from Manhattan, you didn't have to get your car out of a public garage where you have to pay a zillion dollars a day to just keep it there, you just walked down the flights of steps that went from floor to floor of your apartment building — we didn't have elevators then — and you just got in your car parked out front. Of course cars were different then. They had wooden wheels with tar painted on the rims to soften them a bit, and some cars had four wheels and some had three and some had five. They were still working on it. In the back, there was something called a rumble seat which was located where the trunk is now, and you pulled it open and there was a seat there where you could put your horse, which you took in case the car broke down.

They had started building the Long Island Expressway all those years ago, but it was just one lane — they hadn't started widening it — so you could go along for awhile, but then you had to pull over if another car was coming the other way. It was a good road, though. Nice and smooth. Paved.

> The reason for the detour was the presence of a giant ogre that roamed freely in the center of the island.

There was a big rest stop in Great Neck, back then. It was the only one along the Expressway, probably because the Expressway ended a few miles after that at Syosset, but at this rest stop they had a big tent with cots in it where you could lay down to rest for awhile from your journey thus far. There was a second big tent called the Expressway Sanitarium Tent which had a red cross on it. People with TB or the shakes or the vapors could lie down and be attended to by doctors and nurses.

Doctors and nurses made house calls in those days. Of course they didn't have penicillin yet.

There was also there in Great Neck a stable where your horse could stretch his legs for a while after sitting all that way in the rumble seat. You could get a hay bale for your horse for two cents. In the tent you could get a Coca Cola for one cent.

Where the Expressway ended in Syosset there were all these wooden barriers and arrows telling you about the big detour you had to take. From Syosset, you went northeast over unpaved, dusty roads to Huntington Harbor, where they had wooden rafts waiting to take you to Connecticut. You drove your car on, and a series of men with long poles "poled" you across Long Island Sound by sticking the pole in the water to the bottom and sort of heaving you a few feet further across. The fee was three cents.

The reason for the detour, by the way, was the presence of a giant ogre that roamed freely in the center of the island. It was unsafe to try to get past him. And it wasn't until much later that the bands of policemen were able to net the ogre, named Carl, and make it safe. They caught him in a woods that today is called Carle Place.

I don't remember the town you landed at in Connecticut when you took the detour, but I remember that up and down the dock they had all these booths set up at which local residents sold things, like canning jars filled with minced jam, hot apple pies, beaded necklaces, native crafts and native costumes.

To get back to Long Island, you drove your car to another dock and onto the center of a huge wooden ferry where, along each side, there were Vikings with oars who would row you back across the Sound. I remember there was a big sign on board that read NO TIPPING. Arriving at Long Island, you docked at Port Jefferson Harbor, and it was there that you spent the night in an Inn. They served dinner, put kerosene in your car — the kerosene tanks would be empty by that time — and they'd water your horse. I recall that we stayed at an Inn run by a Greek family. I forgot to tell you I was pretty young back then and lived with my parents and my sister. My dad liked this Inn. It was run by Mr. and Mrs. Pellopenossus Metropolis and their ten children. They drank ouzo and sang. Out front there were all these concrete statues. Zeus, Achilles, Helen of Troy, Adonis, King Neptune. The place was called the Inn at Mount Olympus.

The next day, we were off again. The roads were all dusty from there on out, and we all tied handkerchiefs over our faces so we wouldn't breathe in too much of it. A lot of dust did get in our hair and underwear, though.

My dad's favorite road then — there were so many dirt roads that went in so many directions — was the one that went up to the top of Mount Long Island. I bet you didn't know there was a big mountain on Long Island. Well, there was, then. It was 14,000 feet tall, as high as Pike's Peak in Colorado, the wooden sign at the top read. Lots of people took this route out to the Hamptons, because from the top there was such a sensational view. You could see Cuba to the south, Portugal to the east, the Empire State Building in Manhattan to the west. Looking north, you could even see Canada. The big thing up there then was an enormous statue the Canadians had built straddling the St. Lawrence River, 200 feet tall, of a Canadian Mounted Policeman on a horse. It was the ninth wonder of the world.

"Ogre Carl"

The freighters all passed under the legs. Some of you may remember that terrible disaster when a freighter hit the horse's whatchamacallit, and the horse and policeman fell over onto the freighter, sinking it, and causing the biggest kerosene spill that ever was, until that time.

I wish I could remember where Long Island Mountain was back then. I know it's not there now. I think it was in Calverton, or Ronkonkoma or Bohemia. In any case, after the mountain, the big deal destination back then for people coming out from Manhattan was Lake Ronkonkoma. If you were IN, you went to Lake Ronkonkoma, not the Hamptons, and at Lake Ronkonkoma, you ate hotdogs and beer from those pushcarts they had set up around the lake on the beach and you hobnobbed with the hoi poloi. Those of us who could not get in — it was really exclusive — had to keep going and, well, our place to go was the dumpy old Hamptons.

History Zapped

Trouble In East Hampton, Southampton And Sag Harbor

By Dan Rattiner

Over the years, there are surely millions of people whose hearts have been warmed by the East Hampton landmark, "Home Sweet Home." You pass by this old colonial house, on foot or in your car, and you think of the songwriter John Howard Payne, who as a child played in the front yard of this house, and he is now grown, living in London, and remembering the wonderful time he had growing up in East Hampton as a little boy in the late 1790s. He pens the nostalgic words that we know so well "be it ever so humble, there's no place like home." Home Sweet Home. Peaceful East Hampton, you think. America's most beautiful village. Or so said the Saturday Evening Post so long ago.

HOME SWEET HOME

"Home Sweet Home" was written by John Howard Payne with music by Henry R. Bishop in 1823 in England for the 3 act opera Maid of Milan, which debuted in London that year.

'Mid pleasures and palaces Though we may roam Be it ever so humble, There's no place like home. A Charm from the skies Seems to hallow us there, Which seek thro' the world, Is ne'er met with elsewhere. Home, home, sweet sweet home, There's no place like home, There's no place like home.'

Well, it's all a lie, this business about "Home Sweet Home." Some historians, having been commissioned by the East Hampton Historical Society, submitted a research paper last week that concluded John Howard Payne never grew up in East Hampton, never lived in that house, his mother never lived in that house and his father never lived in that house. If it has a name, it should be known as the Captain Elisha Jones House, after the sea captain and merchant who lived there in the first half of the nineteenth century and is most identified with it.

Did Payne have ANYTHING to do with it?

Well, in a word, no. But if you dig down deep, yes, maybe. John Howard Payne was born and

MORE PARISHONERS, BIGGER CHURCH NEEDED

By Dan Rattiner

On January 21, a final decision will be made in Town Hall about the enlargement of a church in the Shinnecock section of Southampton. On St. Andrews Road there is now a beautiful, medium sized Greek Orthodox Church built twenty years ago to house a congregation which was, at that time, about 100 families.

The new church, much larger because the congregation has grown to 250 families, will be the second largest in Southampton. The big, stone Sacred Heart Catholic Church on Hill Street is larger. There is opposition to this expansion and I do not understand it. A church to worship God, a larger church to be sure, but no record holder, should be welcome in our community. We are against giant shopping centers and gambling casinos. What are we for?

The Southampton Greek Orthodox Church under the guidance of Father Alex Karloutsos, has drawn a huge number of worshippers, not only from the Greek Orthodox faith, but from Ukrainian and Russian Orthodox worshippers who do not currently have a church of their own in the community. In the summertime the number of families who attend swells to 700. It has become a major church in this community.

The early roots of the Orthodox religion are traced to beginnings of Christianity in a time soon after the Resurrection of Christ. Then in 323 AD, under Emperor Constantine the Great, the Roman Empire shifted its capital from Rome to Constantinople and Christianity was declared the official religion of the empire.

raised in Manhattan. After a successful early career from age 14 to 22 as a thespian on the Manhattan stage, he moved to London to be a poet, a writer of plays and operas, and to continue with his acting career. In his later years, Payne went to Tunisia, where he served as the American Consul. He died there. Meanwhile, after Payne had gone abroad, mother and father moved to East Hampton. Mother had grown up in that town. And father had gotten a post as a teacher at the Clinton Academy school. One of mom's sisters — she would have been John Howard Payne's aunt — DID own the Captain Elisha Jones House, and if her nephew did visit East Hampton at that time — there is no record of it — and in the course of things not only visited his parents, but also his Aunt Mary, well, that's the connection.

The historians found that the story about John Howard Payne and "Home Sweet Home," was first put forth in the 1880s, more than half a century after Payne wrote the song, by the man who owned the house at the time, Henry Mulford. Mulford apparently thought that giving it a little "history" might increase its value some day if he ever wanted to sell it. Sort of like George Washington Slept Here.

2004 was a very bad year for local history. Early in the year, the Otter Hose Company in Sag Harbor, which long has claimed to have been the first fire department in New York State, got a letter from another fire department in Hudson in upstate New York, saying that Sag Harbor was the second oldest. Hudson was the oldest. And they sent a copy of their charter to prove it. Otter Hose changed the claim on their stationery.

In Southampton, the Halsey House on South Main Street, which for years has been billed as the oldest standing home on eastern Long Island, found out it isn't. They had been doing restoration work. And in the course of it, in opening up the structure, workmen found remnants of where a porch had been attached to an outside wall. Turned out that the porch proved this house wasn't the original Halsey House built in 1648. It was the house built by Halsey at a later date for one of his sons. The original Halsey House, which would have been the oldest, was torn down years ago.

(Elevated to oldest is the Old House in Cutchogue. It was built in 1649.)

Also falling from grace was the belief that the big stone Gardiner house on Main Street in East Hampton was once the summer White House. A fact is that President John Tyler, a widower when he became President in 1840, courted and married 22 year old Julia Gardiner of East Hampton four years later. It was the first wedding ever to take place in the White House. Julia grew up in the Gardiner House on Main Street, so obviously the President and his First Lady and all their children — Julia had 7 — visited here. And undoubtedly stayed in that house.

How Julia and John met, by the way, is a wonderful and well-documented story. It was in 1842. The Secretary of the Navy told the President that the steam frigate Princeton had just been completed and was being taken out for fitting out exercises on the Chesapeake. Perhaps he, the President, would like to go for a ride. The President said he would be delighted.

On board the ship, among many dignitaries, was the Secretary of the Treasury, David Gardiner, and his beautiful 21-year-old daughter, Julia. At one point, the President ordered the big gun on the warship to be fired, just for fun. It turned into a disaster. The charge exploded inside the breech, sending shrapnel everywhere. Among those wounded was David Gardiner, who was taken below, accompanied by his weeping daughter. There, in the presence of the President, who also had come down, he died. And that's how John and Julia met.

Well, it turns out that the big stone Gardiner House on Main Street was built in 1939. The earlier one, the REAL summer White House, had been hit by a giant oak uprooted during the Hurricane of 38. No one inside was injured, but the house had to be torn down. The stone house is its replacement.

It even turns out that the claim "the most beautiful village in America," is not true. And I personally was involved in this. I'm the one that promoted the claim, which you now see everywhere, on brochures, fliers etc.

When I first started Dan's Papers in 1960, an elderly lady with blue hair, who was an officer of the Ladies Village Improvement Society, informed me that I was an interloper in this community who had no business starting a newspaper here. We were talking at the Mulford Farm Fair, at the time an LVIS fundraiser, and she pulled herself up to her full height and glared at me and said "East Hampton, as you

Votes For The Bad Guy

Once A Hero, Now Evil, But People Take A Chance Anyway

By Dan Rattiner

The election of Viktor Yushchenko two weeks ago as President of the Ukraine is a triumph of democracy over corruption. Or a triumph of evil over good.

Evil over good? It is, I am afraid, a Hollywood concept. And it is time they made a movie out of it. Gremlins 2.

You will recall that back in November, Yushchenko was the underdog challenger to what was expected to be a sure victory for Viktor Yanukovych of Kiev. Yanukovych was endorsed by the outgoing President. Yanukovych was a puppet of the Russians. Although the Ukraine is supposed to be a democratic state, everybody in Ukraine knows that winners of elections are ordered up, and ballot stuffing and fraud make the expected happen. Yanukovych was therefore a shoe in. You might as well vote for him.

What wasn't counted upon, however, was the determination, silver tongue and trusted face of Victor Yushchenko. If Yanukovych was fair to good looking, Yushchenko was movie star handsome, honest and one of the most attractive men ever to run for office.

Well, we all know that with 46% of that first vote, Yushchenko was quite right to demand that the vote be set aside as fraudulent. All he needed was another 4% and he would have won. Yanukovych stole at least double that. People jammed the streets, holding up photos of Yushchenko's handsome face. Within a week, the crowds in Kiev numbered over a million and the government caved. There would be a re-vote. It was held two weeks ago, and Yushchenko won it, hands down. Democracy has triumphed in the Ukraine.

Hollywood has a long tradition of defining good and evil at first glance. Especially with men.

But it is so much more than that. Soon after the first election, while the people demonstrated in the streets, Yushchenko's voice was heard loud and clear over radio broadcasts, but he was nowhere to be seen. He had become sick after eating dinner with the Director of Ukrainian Internal Security one week before the first election. It turned out he had been poisoned, having consumed 1,000 times the lethal dose of a chemical waste product called dioxin. It was amazing he had not died. But what it did do, besides make him very sick, was turn his face into that of an ugly, evil ogre. He recovered from his sickness, but if anything he became even uglier and more evil looking. And then he won the election anyway.

I mentioned at the top that a movie about this could be called Gremlins 2. The reason is, if you remember the film, that at the beginning of the movie these cute little furry baby creatures are hatched. They bill and they coo. They have big brown eyes filled with wonder. Everyone who sees them loves them.

But then, in about three weeks, they grow up. As grownups they have fangs and claws and evil expressions. They bite people's arms off and make cackling evil laughing sounds. The trick now is to somehow kill all of them before they kill us.

Hollywood has a long tradition of defining good and evil at first glance. Especially with men. Good is blond, tall and handsome, evil is hairy, swarthy and mustachioed. How these stereotypes have survived the triumph of political correctness is a mystery to me. But it has. Cary Grant is good. Sean Connery is good. Arnold Schwarzenegger, God bless him, is good. As for evil, it resides in the eyes of Ricardo Montalban and Peter Lorre. Boris Karloff is evil. Alan Rickman is one of the evilest people on the planet.

And so we come to Viktor Yushchenko. Yushchenko, before the poisoning, was as good as it gets. Yushchenko, after the poisoning, looks like something requiring immediate extermination. Yet they elected him anyway. Amazing.

Viktor Yanukovych

Doctors say that the effects of the poisoning will wear off in three to four months, and all the boils on his face will disappear. Right. Let me give it to you straight. The man has gone ugly down to the bone. And there's no turning back.

What I have written is meant as no disrespect to Mr. Yushchenko. He is a brave man who has emerged victorious over corruption and fraud. He is a beloved figure in his country. He has engineered a triumph for democracy. He will go far.

But you know what? Everybody better watch out. •

may know, is the most beautiful village in America, having been voted as such by no less than the Saturday Evening Post."

The Saturday Evening Post, at the time, was, along with LIFE and TIME, the most widely-read magazine in America. I believed her. And in frequent forays into local history in my articles from then on, I referred to that accolade as fact. From there it got picked up by others and pretty soon everybody was saying it.

Around 1990, a magazine writer I met informed me that for nearly thirty years he worked at the Saturday Evening Post, and never heard of that claim. He suggested I look into it. I did. I went to the Fifth Avenue Annex of the New York Public Library where they have catalogued all the old magazines in America, and I looked at every article I could find about East Hampton printed before 1960 in the Saturday Evening Post. There weren't any.

"Not By Betsy Ross"

Then I tried to find ANY article that might have made that claim. I found references to East Hampton in the National Geographic, in Holiday Magazine and in TIME. But no claim.

Well, there IS one claim that still stands. I believe that Dan's Papers is the First Free Resort Newspaper in America. And probably the first free newspaper in America. I can tell you, I knew of no other anywhere when I thought of this one. I have written this claim on my masthead every week for decades. It remains unchallenged.

Credit Information

If you are trying to obtain a mortgage loan, your credit profile will be an important aspect of the loan approval process. All credit information must be obtained and used in accordance with the terms of the Fair Credit Reporting Act and the Equal Credit Opportunity Act. These laws were enacted to protect the applicant from inaccurate information contained in the credit report and unfair credit practices, including discrimination. These laws, however, do not prohibit a lender from establishing valid credit criteria.

Almost everyone has a few blemishes on their credit history. It is advisable to obtain a copy of your credit report before you apply for a loan. Occasionally a negative item that has been resolved is still appearing on your credit report. In this case, you can request that the discrepancy be removed by the reporting agency. If a derogatory item appears on your credit history, an explanation will be required that may also expedite the application process. Staying one step ahead of the game is always wise and can speed up the loan application process.

The Hawks, The Mayor, The Co-op, Pigeons And Camden, NJ

By Dan Rattiner

It was such a New York story. The board of a wealthy Fifth Avenue co-op decides to evict two red tailed hawks that have been nesting on a ledge there for many years. Environmentalists object. Protesters march. And for the first time in history a co-op board backs down. The hawks return.

But is that the whole story?

The other day, in a dumpster on the corner of 73rd Street and Fifth Avenue, a reporter for Dan's Papers found a co-op board file folder that tells an entirely different story. Here are the letters that were in this folder, arranged chronologically. If this blows the lid off this situation, so be it.

Another dead pigeon carcass was tossed down from the ledge as myself and my husband and children were returning from Lincoln Center. It missed. But what if it had hit one of us? Or somebody else? This building will incur lawsuits if these occurrences are not specifically mentioned as covered in our homeowner's insurance contract. Please remember to keep this letter confidential. There are the tree huggers out there. No telling what they might do if they knew who I am.

from Mr. Skelling, President

I have spoken to our insurance broker. You are correct that a pigeon carcass thrown by a red tailed hawk is not specifically mentioned in our insurance contract. I am looking into this further. There are the issues of disease and littering. And all those people with binoculars, constantly peering into our building. And the hawks have a funky smell. This is not a healthy situation. I'm with you, ma'am.

We have received your letter about the pigeons. We're hawks. That's what we do. We lived at 927 Fifth Avenue before the building became a co-op. So for that reason, and for many, many others, you do not have any jurisdiction over us. Did we sign anything? We didn't sign anything. Anybody comes up here better watch out. I have received the lawyer's report. With the City's help, a State environmental law protecting them has been modified. Also, the 1917 endangered species law does not apply, according to our attorney. It's good to have friends in high places. Now we can evict them. Burn this.

Dear Mr. Mayor. Perhaps you have seen us swooping around over Central Park. We are an endangered species. According to the wildlife laws proposed by Teddy Roosevelt and signed by President Woodrow Wilson in 1917, we have every right to stay where we have been living at 927 Fifth Avenue all these years. But then, our nest was taken down, we were evicted, and now we are homeless. At the present time, we are in the park, day and night, good weather and bad, just northeast of the Sheep Meadow, in a tree. Please help us.

Lots of news. Our spy on the board of the Audubon Society says that the hawks will probably wait for about ten days, then with heavy hearts give up and make another nest somewhere else. Ha, ha. The architect designing the new metal grillework that will hold the nest has agreed to take five days, the fabricator another five days — he will be ordering special steel from Ethiopia — and the people who put it up fifteen days because they first have a special job they have to finish at the Hilton. Too bad. We did our best. Is there anything we can do to get these protesters to shut up?

MOO!

Come Watch The Cow Jump Through A Ring Of Fire

By Christian McLean

"The Greatest Show on Earth" may not be as great as it used to be, with the help of Councilman Steven Kenny's newly proposed legislation calling for a ban on the use of a vast and somewhat odd array of animals from circus performances in the Town of Southampton. The major focus is to prevent domesticated feral beasts from performing in big top shows, in order to "protect wild and exotic animals from cruel and inhumane treatment that often occurs in controlling the animal for entertainment purposes." The proposed list seeks to ban elephants, primates, lions, tigers, bears, zebras, marine mammals, crocodiles, kangaroos, camels, giraffes, hippopotamuses, rhinoceroses, civets, wolves, hyenas, skunks, weasels, anteaters, armadillos, mongooses, and raccoons, leaving dogs, cats, other domesticated animals and reptiles to go on with the show.

Southampton is not alone in this quest to rid circuses of some of their greatest attractions. Towns throughout the country are seeking similar legislation based on the same argument. A bill was also raised in the House of Representatives (Bill HR 2929). A few years ago, "The Captive Elephant Accident Protection Act" sought to ban the use of elephants in circuses, citing abuse and a potential danger to audiences as their justification. The argument was supported with research from organizations such as PETA and HSUS (Humane Society of the United States). However, their information cited that in the past twenty years, fewer than five members of the public have been injured while attending a circus performance in the United States, and none of the incidents had any connection to direct contact with elephants. Eventually, after hearing both sides of the argument, the House of Representatives chose not to pass HR 2929, allowing elephants to remain a huge circus attraction.

> "The Captive Elephant Accident Protection Act" sought to ban the use of elephants in circuses, citing abuse...

Because the federal government refused to pass this it is up to local town officials to pass their own laws.

East Hampton's Donald Horowitz, a long time circus hobbyist, said that in similar cases where small towns with only a few board members are given the right to vote on legislation, the circus almost always loses. On the other hand, when the actual town members are given a say in the matter, the circus generally wins. Southampton Town's citizens will be given that opportunity at a public hearing on January 25th.

For a moment, let us speculate on the future of circuses in Southampton if Councilman Kenny's legislation passes. The first scenario is that the circus may go elsewhere. Circuses do not have to perform in Southampton. They can simply book new towns where no ban exists and the people and storekeepers of Southampton will be deprived of an annual tradition and local revenue. Another option is to hold a circus with animals that are not on the banned list. Cole Brothers Circus, which has been performing in Southampton for the better part of two decades, has said they would still entertain without their exotic animals as they did last year.

With such pressure being placed on the treatment and care of animals, should we start worrying about the polo season, too? Is transporting horses in trailers any more or less humane? Can people still have aquariums in their homes? Are lionfish the next to go?

In my many travels, I have actually seen a circus without animals; the main attraction was an acrobat who would contort her body in such a way that two other acrobats used it as a coffee table. Trust me, it was far from the cat's meow. So if Southampton wants the circus (animals and all) back in town this summer, at January 25th's public hearing it may be a good idea to send in more than just the clowns. Then again, if a circus is willing to appear with a large part of their performers sidelined, they may try new and exciting ways to dazzle Southampton audiences by training other animals. If the world famous raccoon and skunk shows are over, other woodland creatures like squirrels and chipmunks will get their long awaited (and well-deserved) moment in the spotlight. Imagine chipmunks dressed in tuxedos riding miniature bicycles or aardvarks (which are different from anteaters) playing horns and balancing beach balls on their noses. With bears banned, buffalo will be trained to dance on their hind legs wearing funny little hats. Life-size cardboard cutouts of lions will be placed inside cages and daring lion tamers will attempt the unthinkable, risking paper cut after paper cut as they place their heads inside the gaping jaws of these ferocious beasts. White horses will have black lines painted on them and be paraded around before unsuspecting fans. Highland cows will jump through rings of fire without singeing their shaggy coats. The possibilities are truly endless. Maybe the ban really isn't that bad of an idea. I mean, who wants to see tigers when you can watch gerbils in little wheels or a moose do a soft-shoe?

There was no bridge across the Shinnecock Canal back then. What you had to do was get up a full head of steam, zip past the Canoe Place Inn at about seventy miles an hour and go barreling up this wooden ramp to just fly over the canal to land in all these hay bales the farmers had set up on the other side.

Like I said, we came out with my mom and dad back then, and every time we did this, my sister and I thought this was just great.

And so you'd get out to the Hamptons. It was about thirty-seven hours, if you add it all up. But we never complained. We'd drive down to the beach and just park our car anywhere — no beach stickers, no police giving out tickets, no laws about dogs on the beach, no nothing. We'd go for a swim. When it was late at night, we'd lay a blanket under the car and sleep there. So if it rained we wouldn't get wet.

You might wonder what we did for food, coming out here in the old days. There were no restaurants of course. We'd just pull over and pick some strawberries or cauliflower. Dad would surfcast for flounder. If we needed something to drink, we'd milk a cow and hope the farmer wouldn't catch us.

Those were the days. •

Burnt Point Sold, R.D.L Gardiner Estate Offered

By David Stoll

The recent record-setting sale of Burnt Point, that extraordinary mansion on Georgica Pond, for $45 million has been much talked about, as has the auction of the late Robert David Lion Gardiner's furniture and the placing of his East Hampton mansion for sale. While both of these houses are amazing in their own rights, perhaps just as interesting are the histories of the houses that used to stand where the current mansions have been built. Those houses were occupied for a time by historical figures with rich histories and stories.

President Tyler Visits East Hampton. The late Robert David Lion Gardiner was a descendent of the Lion Gardiner who came to East Hampton during the 1600s and bought Gardiner's Island from the Algonquian Indians for a gun, gunpowder, cloth and a large black dog. For generations, the Gardiners also owned a home on over five acres set back from Main Street in East Hampton. Earlier, the Gardiner East Hampton home was a Greek Revival mansion. Among the residents of that house was Julia Gardiner, who married President Tyler (30 years her senior) in 1844, just eight months before the end of his term.

Elected Vice President by southern States' Rights forces when the nationalist William Henry Harrison was elected President in 1840 (their slogan was "Tippecanoe and Tyler Too", referring to Harrison's famous 1811 battle against the Indian chieftain Tecumseh), Tyler became President upon Harrison's death from the flu shortly after the inauguration in 1841. The nationalist Whigs soon came to regret having included Tyler on the ticket, as Tyler began to veto much of their nationalist agenda, including establishing a National Bank in several states a tariff bill that would have benefited the northern states. Articles of Impeachment were drafted on the grounds that he had misused the veto power (the first time the Impeachment power was invoked against a President), but the resolution of impeachment failed in the House. During his Presidency, the rift between the North and South deepened.

> Gardiner's estate has put the mansion up for sale and will place much of the furniture and art up for auction

After they married, and during the final months of the Presidency, Julia entertained in Washington, following all the formal social conventions of the time, and she and Tyler spent part of the summer at Gardiner's mansion in East Hampton. When he left office, Tyler and Julia moved to Tyler's mansion at Sherwood Forest in Virginia, where Julia presided over slaves and re-designed the mansion in a Greek Revival style, adding lattice, columns, pilasters, cornices and mantles — perhaps to remind her of the Gardiner mansion.

Years later, the East Hampton mansion would pass to Sarah Diodati Gardiner, the aunt of Robert David Lion Gardiner. After the hurricane of 1938 severely damaged the mansion, Sarah retained one of the great architecture firms of the day, Palm Beach's Wyeth and King, to build her a new mansion, which was completed in 1940. She may have chosen Wyeth and King because the firm was renowned for designing Doris Duke's Shangri-La mansion in Hawaii. Upon Sarah's death in 1953, the mansion was left to Robert David Lion Gardiner, who died at the age of 93 in August. Gardiner's Island, for which the Gardiner family is better known, has passed to his niece, but the East Hampton property remains with his estate.

Valued at $150 million

Gardiner's estate has put the mansion up for sale and will place much of the furniture and art up for auction through Christie's beginning this month. The mansion, designed in the Italian Renaissance style, is notable for its stone façade. Although smaller than many of today's mansions at a "mere" 8,000 square feet, the Gardiner house brings to mind the aristocracy of late 18th Century England. Near the front door is a receiving room with an ornate bathroom (called a "library" now, as receiving rooms long ago fell out of favor). The dark, very solid hardwood floors lead to a grand foyer which can double as a ball room, and on either side of the foyer is a very large living room and formal dining room, each with wonderful details, a fireplace and spectacular views of the enormous grounds. The house also has five bedrooms (each with a bath, and two with fireplaces), two full kitchens, an enormous pantry, a mud room, a huge linen closet and separate servants' quarters in an upstairs wing that adjoins the main house on the upstairs and by stairs leading to the kitchen. This wing has four small rooms, each with a sink, and one bathroom.

The enormous grounds begin with a large yard from which a stone path leads one through a narrow walkway with enormous trees on either side. Along the way, the trees briefly part, so that one may spend time in quiet garden areas. The path ends at a pool surrounded by hedges. Nearby is a three-car garage with an upstairs apartment. The property and house are on sale for $9.9 million.

Although the house is now empty, it once featured a painting by Salvador Dali of Gardiner's wife, of which Gardiner was particularly proud. Included in this month's Christie's auction are a rare and historically important Chippendale mahogany bonnet top chest-on-chest made in 1772, several Old Master paintings, and various historical prints, documents and manuscripts. Local historical museums intend to bid for various important documents apparently relating to the founding of the Hamptons villages and towns.

Paris Review Literati. It is now well known that Stewart and Carol Rahr have purchased Burnt Point for $45 million cash, the largest residential real estate transaction in New York history. Today, Burnt Point is a 25-acre estate in Wainscott on Georgica Pond. Its prior owner, R. David Campbell, bought the property in 1997 for $10 million, tore down the house and retained the architects Fleetwood, Lenahan and McMullan to create a world-class residence. The result: an 18,000 square-foot main house with 25 rooms (including 8 bedrooms, 10 full bathrooms and 4 powder rooms), tennis courts, manmade ponds, views of Georgica Pond and the ocean, a wine cellar, a guesthouse, a 9-car garage, a horizon pool, custom-made windows and woodwork, and many other features. Forbes magazine named the house one of the top ten in the world. The Rahrs bought the house fully furnished. It took years, several real estate brokers and an unsuccessful auction before star Manhattan agent Dolly Lenz of Prudential Douglas Elliman made the sale happen.

The house that Campbell bought and tore down had been owned by Harry Mathews. The son of a well-to-do family from Manhattan and Georgica Pond, Mathews rebelled against his Waspy, Harvard upbringing when he went AWOL from the Navy and eloped with the artist Niki de Saint Phalle, and moved to France. After their divorce in 1958 (he took care of their son and daughter), he became friendly with several important writers of the day, including John Ashbery, Maxine Groffsky and most importantly for his development, Georges Perec. Mathews became the only American member of the famous French literary group Oulipo. He also met the Hamptons' favorite son George Plimpton, and became a frequent contributor to, and editor of, the Paris Review.

Starting in the 1970s, Mathews spent part of his time in New York with his soon-to-be wife, writer Marie Chaix, and taught at Columbia. To get away from the City, he spent more time in Key West than in the Hamptons, but he was a part of Plimpton's group of writers, such as Jean Stafford, A.J. Liebling, Harold Rosenberg, Kurt Vonnegut, Joseph Heller, E.L. Doctorow and Truman Capote. It does not appear that Mathews hosted any of the fabulous Paris Review anniversary parties thrown by Plimpton, but he certainly would have had some memorable dinner parties at his house on Georgica Pond.

When Mathews sold the house to Campbell, he subdivided his land and kept a parcel for himself. The Rahrs said that they plan to hold a party for their new neighbors during Memorial Day weekend. Hopefully Mathews will attend, and regale the Rahrs and their guests with stories of what literati said and did on the same grounds in a time gone by.

The Sheltered Islander By Sally Flynn

The Tao of the Sock
Sheltered Islander #331

Psychologists have divided life up into stages: Childhood, Adolescence, Adulthood, Middle Age and up. But there are other ways to identify the many stages of life.

The night before Christmas, my brother David said, "I hope Mom gives me socks, I really need some." I remembered back to earlier Christmases' when he was a teen and said, "Why does she always give me socks? I hate socks!" And even further back when he was a little boy, hurling the new socks across the room shouting, "Socks don't count for a present!" Recalling this and sipping eggnog, my eyes drifted to the mantle, and seeing the stockings, it all became clear to me, like when the smoke alarm goes off to tell me dinner is done...socks. Socks tell us where we are in life as well as any psych book can.

In childhood, we say yes to Santa and no to socks. Our parents try to fool us into thinking socks are a present by giving us cutsie pie cartoon character socks, called the Disney Deception Maneuver. But even a small child knows a sock from a tricycle. I recall that not even Little Mermaid socks with sparkles to match the Little Mermaid dress counted as a present to my daughter.

In adolescence, we say no to Santa and no to socks. We want car keys and money, no gift wrap, no kisses from Grandma, no sit nice and visit with relatives. Teenage boys have no regard for socks at all. Socks to them are just something their mother yells about; why are they on the floor? Where's the other one? Why are the clean mixed in with the dirty ones? Blah, blah, blah.... Teen girls like socks that match, but they don't know how that happens. They just open their sock drawer where the sock fairy has left folded matched pairs It's magic.

When we become adults, we say no to Santa and yes to socks. Socks become our friends, especially now that we have to buy them. Socks show us the wisdom of our mothers; they do keep your feet warm and you won't catch cold so easy. We are careful not to disregard mateless socks or socks with one hole or a thin spot. Mateless socks go into a sock bag. In time, mateless socks find new partners inside the sock bag, maybe not a perfect match, but they can live together in your shoes without fighting. Socks with thin spots or holes, as their last service to mankind, become "boot socks." Every working man on Shelter Island has a complete collection of boot socks. They all buy winter workboots a half size up to incorporate two pair of boot socks over their good socks and feet. An Island worker in winter without boot socks is a broken man. Other Island men scrounge and donate boot socks to him as quick as possible to help him get on his feet again. I believe the Lions Club has a special sock fund just for these emergencies.

But it's the Middle Age and up when we really understand socks. We say yes to Santa and yes to socks. No longer just foot coverings, they expand to become polish mittens for boat brass. Spray them with Pledge and they can dust. Wad them up to create a push up bra. A beautiful silver haired lady named Susan in the Shelter Island Yacht Club told me once she makes really comfy nonskid boat slippers by sticking grip strips to the bottom of old socks. Plus, tube socks filled with tennis balls made great tiny boat bumpers in a tight slip. A tube sock with an orange in the bottom is a weapon you can use to bonk a burglar while filling the air with a lovely citrus fragrance at the same time. The weather sock was no doubt created by a wise old meteorologist who noticed that socks on a clothesline showed you which way the wind blew.

And somewhere back in time, a grandma wanted to make absolutely sure the family would have matching socks to wear to church on Christmas day. In sheer frustration, she nailed the best mateless socks to the fireplace, hoping that Santa would leave new mates. But Santa didn't know that. What did she think he was, a mind reader? When he arrived, he saw the line of socks and thought, "What a nice gift guide." He could tell from the size and design of the socks which socks were for whom. So he put the girl toys in the little pink stockings, the boy toys in the small brown socks, and so on. And that is why, to this very day, pretty, mateless stockings are hung by the chimney with care...

Headquarters for the new religion was at Constantinople, now Istanbul, and other sees were at Alexandria, Rome, Antioch, and Jerusalem. In the 11th century AD, Rome severed its ties with the other four Orthodox Churches in an event known as the Great Schism of 1054. Currently there is an Archdiocese in New York City with His Eminence Archbishop Demetrios as the religious leader. Father Alex Karloutsos was, and still is, one of the leading religious figures within the New York diocese, and handles external affairs. He does that job in the city part time and is the pastor to the flock in Southampton the rest of the time. He has met with every President since Jimmy Carter, and was with President Bush as one of the hosts when the President visited the ruins of the World Trade Center. Most recently, he was in Rome visiting the Pope, along with the New York Patriarch, to receive two relics that had been held in the Vatican since the Fourth Crusade in 1204. They are the remains of John Chrysostom and Gregory the Theologian, two great saints. They will be reburied in Constantinople.

As for the Church, it sits on a campus of 12 acres. The old church, built in the Byzantine style, has a 35-foot high dome and consists of 3,100 square feet. The new church, designed by architect Gil Lopez of Austin Texas, will also be in the Byzantine style, and will have a 65-foot high dome and will occupy 7,500 square feet. It will be connected to the old church, which will become a community center, by a more straightforward building that will be a cultural center and school on two floors, each consisting of 8,000 square feet.

Father Alex

People in the neighborhood say St. Andrews Road, where the entrance sits, will be packed with traffic because of the school and larger church. That may happen in August, when the church holds a widely attended weekend long festival for the community. But so what? I wish it were otherwise, but people do drive in their cars to go to church on Sunday. Or to Synagogue on Friday night. During the high holy days in the Jewish religion, the Jewish Center in East Hampton holds a service attended by as many as 1,800 worshippers all at the same time. The police are out directing traffic. But there is no objection to any of this on the part of the local government. How could there be? This is a wonderful thing, worshipping God.

We urge the Southampton Town Planning Board, if all technical and legal requirements are in order, to approve the application of the construction of this Byzantine Church. •

The Holiday Season That Was

Happy New Year, Long Island wine lovers! As you can probably imagine, I sampled a lot of wines between Thanksgiving and New Year's. Dinner parties, office parties, nights out on the town, quiet nights at home... they're all great opportunities to try new and exciting wines.

Sure, some were flat, lifeless and noteworthy only in their mediocrity. But there were a half dozen that stood out – wines that I'd gladly drink again and again and again.

Peconic Bay Winery's whites are some of the first that I tried when I moved to Long Island almost six years ago. Since then, they've been consistently good, easy-drinkers with enough fruit to please most any palate. The recently released 2003 Peconic Bay Winery Steel Fermented Chardonnay ($13) is no exception. Light and made in a Chablis-like style, it offers honey and lemongrass flavors with notes of vanilla and Granny Smith apple. Great acidity makes it the perfect mate for fresh seafood.

On the other end of the Chardonnay vine is the 2002 Corey Creek Reserve Chardonnay ($29). Barrel fermentation and ten months aging in French oak gives this wine a rich golden hue and an impressive nose of fire-roasted marshmallows and butterscream with subtle hints of pears and apples. Butterscotch and roasted pears blend well with toasty vanilla and honey on the palate.

Three reds from Palmer Vineyards caught my attention between Christmas and New Year's as well.

For an affordable, gulpable red, try Palmer's N41 W72 Merlot Cuvee 2003 ($12). Named for the vineyard's Long Island latitude and longitude, it pays homage to "the coordinates for great Merlot." Smooth with fresh blackberries and cherries, this simple vino is great for pizza.

For a bit more depth, try the 2002 Palmer Cabernet Franc ($18). Still smooth like its Merlot cuvee cousin, it offers black cherries and black pepper on the nose and palate, all framed by nice acidity. I just might drink this with turkey next Thanksgiving.

My favorite of the Palmer lot was the Palmer Select Reserve Red ($25). A Bordeaux-style blend of 63 percent Cabernet Franc, 25 percent Merlot and 12 percent Cabernet Sauvignon, it's an extremely well-made and well-balanced red. Elegant from the moment it hits the glass, it is a rich, deep wine with black fruit and chocolate flavors and a well integrated tannic grip.

As with any tasting session (even one done over a couple months), there was a clear favorite – a wine that jumps up out of the glass and makes one take notice. Wolffer's 2000 Estate Selection Merlot ($35) was the hit of Christmas Day. Full-bodied and stunningly rich, it offers full but velvety smooth tannins. Exquisite blackberry flavors are joined by nuances of cedar, tobacco and wet stone. We enjoyed it as we opened our gifts, but I'd suggest trying it with a slab of hearty beef, lamb or venison.

2005 is here and it promises to be an exciting year for Long Island wines and wineries. Keep an eye out for better wines at better prices, new packaging (maybe even a screw top) and some new first releases as well. Come along for the ride.

Local Resident Makes A Difference

Angelo J. Mangia, an Orient summer resident, didn't spend his winter vacation on the beach at St. Bart's, although he did visit a tropical locale. The CEO of the Standard Funding Corporation (headquartered in Woodbury) recently returned from a life-altering experience in Nicaragua, where he traveled as a member of a team of CEOs whose mission was to build houses for Bridges To Community, a Westchester-based non-profit community development organization. As part of a team of 14, Mangia, the first Long Island CEO to participate, traveled to Nicaragua and built two cinder block homes in 7 days. During construction, the team lived in a village of about 300 people in Masaya. On their first night in the village, an eight-month-old child died as a result of dehydration. An effort was made to find a doctor at a hospital in Managua, but none was found.

Angelo Mangia in Nicaragua

This is only one of many stories Mangia has to tell about the experience. Currently, Mangia is putting together a team of Long Islanders to go to Nicaragua this November. Look for an upcoming interview with Angelo Mangia here in Dan's North Fork.

Law And Disorder, A Lecture On Jewish American Leaders

Temple Israel will present a lecture by noted author and historian Dr. Kenneth Libo entitled, "Law and Order: Jewish Lawmakers and Lawbreakers." Only in America have Jews been leaders on both sides of the law. As much as Brandeis and Frankfurter number among America's great lawmakers, so Rothstein and Lansky are among America's notorious crime figures. All grew up Jewish, and all rebelled against the status quo. How being Jewish affected their lives is the subject of this talk. Dr. Libo is co-author of World of Our Fathers and the author of We Lived There Too, a history of Jews in the American West. The lecture, on January 29 at 11:30 a.m., is free and open to all. "The Gates" Go Up In Central Park

Renowned international artists Christo and Jeanne-Claude are famous for their temporary large-scale environmental works (both urban and rural) that have elements of painting, sculpture, architecture and urban planning. Scheduled to be on exhibit February 12-27, the artists' project "The Gates" will consist of 7,500 saffron-colored gates, from which will hang bright nylon panels, that are 16-feet tall and set up at 12-foot intervals along 23 miles of pedestrian walkways through New York's Central Park. In falling snow or on clear days, walking through these structures will have the effect of seeing a billowing, orange-gold sky. This project, begun in 1979, is about to become a stunning reality. Join Mattituck art historian Joyce Beckenstein on February 6 at 2 p.m. at the Mattituck Library for a lecture on this extraordinary project. Call 298-4134.

Away At School... By David Lion Rattiner

Donate, You'll Feel Good

I wanted to write this week about how I am thinking about asking Jennifer Aniston out on a date to help her get over Brad Pitt, but I can't bring myself to do it. I haven't been able to shake the tsunami disaster off my mind. Ever since the disaster happened all I have been able to think about are the horrible stories from survivors, the holocaust-like pictures of the dead being buried by the hundreds and the difficult challenge of helping the struggling survivors. Generally, when I write this column, I try to think up something funny that happened to me personally or I try to write about something that I think is funny in the news. But for this week's column I just do not feel right about doing that.

There is a number that you can say in respect to the tsunami that sends shivers down my spine. That number is 150,000. More than 150,000 people are dead. The news is reporting that this number will possibly double due to disease and starvation. The entire world is responding to the disaster, with the richest countries supplying aid to the region, sending basic necessities for human life.

One of the things that is really bothering me about this disaster is people's ability to say that we are making a mistake on focusing so much energy on the disaster because it will draw our attention away from the war on terror. To me, this is an incredibly arrogant and ignorant thing to say. I was talking to a guy I work with last night about the tsunami and he was trying to convince me that it wasn't our problem and that "s*#t happens and we can't take resources away from achieving our goal in Iraq." I felt like punching this guy in the face. Yeah, things happen that are terrible, but you don't ignore them when they do because you are too busy. Especially when you are the most powerful nation in the world. I don't see how you can correlate our level of concern about the disaster in Asia with what we are trying to accomplish in Iraq. You can call me a liberal if you want, but I am more interested in helping an entire region that has been struck by one of the worst natural disasters in the history of earth than helping the useless cause of trying to get them to sell their oil cheap. To be honest, I would rather just flush my money down the toilet. But hey, that's just me.

Another thing that was really bothering me about this whole effort is how I felt like there is pretty much nothing that I can do to help. I can't just fly over there and start feeding people. I can't wave a wand and make everything back to normal. I felt completely useless in the world. Even when I went to a store and bought a sandwich the thought ran through my mind to send the sandwich by mail over to Asia. I was getting so mad at myself for not doing anything about the situation. I could not even write this column without feeling bad. I wanted to write about my latest discovery of Guinness in a bottle, or how Jennifer Aniston is back on the market and I'm thinking about asking her out, or about the idiot submarine driver who went aground. But I couldn't do it. This tsunami has affected me, and all of us, for that matter, and I did not know how to shake this feeling of guilt and helplessness.

I was talking to my friend John Schirrippa about how I was feeling about the disaster and how I wished there was something that I could do about it and he told me that he went and donated ten dollars to the relief fund by going to unicef.org. He told me he had been feeling the same way about the disaster and that it was important. John is one of those people that always has had the ability to put things in perspective for me and I realized immediately after talking to him that I should donate some money to the effort as well.

Today I went to the unicef.org website and donated ten dollars to the tsunami relief effort and I encourage you to do the same. This is the first time that I have ever done anything like this and I got to tell you, I felt pretty good about it. I know that ten dollars is not very much money, but at least it is something, and when combined with millions of others who send money, it will make a difference.

After I donated the money, I have to say, I felt like I had done something and it felt good. I no longer felt helpless about the situation and I no longer found myself consumed by the fact that I did not have the ability to do anything about it. The fact of the matter is I can do something and that something is to send money.

When it comes down to it, organizations like unicef are about helping people, without any underlying ambition or agenda. They are simply about going to work to help others so that they can live better lives and I think that is a good thing. I wish everything worked that way.

When In Manhattan... BY Oliver Peterson

The Big City Can't Get Enough of Our Little Towns

Welcome to another year in Manhattan. The real slow time has begun in the Hamptons, signified by the 2-hour parking machines in East Hampton finally donning their shrouds to mourn the passing of our final weekends with visitors from parts west and around the world. It's a new and desolate year of gray trees, gray roads, and gray skies. Oh, I almost forgot the gray sea! Only a local could enjoy such a moment of peace away from an increasingly long tourist season. Some of us, however, still need some stimuli in addition to hiking the freezer-burned golf courses or shopping the Bridgehampton Commons, over and over and over again. We escape to the city to quell our winter doldrums or grab a bit of different culture even if we love it here now, as I do. Beginning Thursday, one of our greatest cultural institutions, Guild Hall, is showing highlights from its permanent collection of artworks in Manhattan. It's a great opportunity to remind ourselves we live in a fantastic and exciting place no matter how quiet it can be at times.

The résumé of artists that have called the East End home reads like a Who's Who of great American painters and sculptors, not to mention writers. Guild Hall was founded in 1931 as a community cultural center and began to accumulate its permanent collection almost immediately. Works by Thomas and Mary Nimmo Moran, George Inness, Childe Hassam, Arnold Genthe, and Gaines Ruger Donoho are among the earliest acquisitions. By the 1960s, the focus of the collection turned toward those artists who lived and worked in our area. We know that even then, they weren't in short supply. Today, Guild Hall holds some 1,900 works, much of which comes from the post-World War II era. Major names include heavyweights that are still living as well as many that have passed on, existing only through their work and legend. This exhibit features important works by artists such as Max Ernst, Jackson Pollock, Willem de Kooning, Alphonso Ossorio, James Brooks, Jane Freilicher, Fairfield Porter, Jane Wilson, Roy Lichtenstein, Audrey Flack, Miriam Schapiro, Chuck Close, Saul Steinberg, Andy Warhol, April Gornik, David Salle, and Donald Sultan. Don't forget about those I mentioned before. Childe Hassam, Thomas Moran, and Gaines Ruger Donoho were among the first artists acquired, but their masterpieces can be seen today.

The show is being held at the UBS Gallery in Midtown, on the West Side. UBS has had a long-standing commitment to the arts. Each year, they sponsor five exhibitions at the gallery. Through this program, UBS Gallery offers non-profit New York area artists and cultural organizations a space to show, and exposure to a new audience. Much of what they exhibit may not have otherwise been seen. The employees, clients, and passersby are given the chance to have their artistic interest sparked as they view the gems that have been placed in their path. In this case, anyone who has even the slightest background in art will see a piece they know, or at least recognize one of the artist's names. Maybe the next time they visit our humble towns to sit on the beaches, work on their tans, talk on their cell phones, or type reports on their laptops, a stop at Guild Hall might cross their mind as evening falls. For us, the show reinforces what we already know, but may sometimes take for granted. We live in one of the most beautiful and culturally rich places in the world. In the biggest city on Earth, the Hamptons are a main event even when it's too cold for the beach.

An Adventure in the Arts: Selections from Guild Hall's Permanent Collection at UBS Art Gallery opens Thursday, January 13 - March 25. Gallery Hours are Monday-Friday, 8 a.m.-6 p.m. at 285 Avenue of the Americas, between 51st and 52nd Streets. Call Guild Hall or UBS Gallery for more information. Just because you live here, doesn't mean you shouldn't visit this excellent selection of the best we have to offer.

CLASSIC CARS WITH BOB GELBER

One of the books I received for Christmas is titled Warbirds, which is the name given to a military aircraft that has seen service in various fields of battle. While reading about the development of many famous fighter planes, it dawned on me that there is a unique comparison between warbirds and racing cars. They were both built to best the competition.

Originally, race cars were modified street cars with cut down bodywork. Early fighter planes were wood-framed and fabric covered affairs that were endowed with two wings. To go faster, they evolved into one-winged machines for less air resistance and coined the word aerodynamics.

Another important development was the use of a new building material, aluminum, instead of fabric and wood. It was much stronger and just a little heavier. Along with this new material, monocoupe construction came into being. Monocoupe construction involved unstressed aluminum wrapped around an aluminum frame and was used for the fuselage and wings. To complete this advancement new, more powerful engines were developed.

Automobile race car construction followed the path of airplane development. Power to weight was always the formula for speed in cars as well as planes, so early race builders looked for ways to make their cars lighter. Originally, race cars developed metal tube chassis, identical to the early airplanes. The race cars had bodywork that was covered with various materials: wood, fabric, and even papier-mâché.

Eventually, lightweight aluminum was used to cover the tube chassis. When airplanes went with monocoupe chassis design, race cars were soon to follow and are still built this way today. Paralleling airplane design, over the years more powerful engines have been built for automobiles. They have reached such horsepower numbers that the average high performance road car has a higher top speed than the average single engine, privately owned, Piper or Cessna one sees at any small airport. Of course, fire breathing Warbirds are much faster than any ground based machine.

Jaguar Type D

I have always called the North American P-51 Mustang the '57 Chevy of Warbirds, simply because it looks so correct. It doesn't even look American, but instead like a muscle bound British Spitfire. The plane was badly needed by the Allies so it was designed and built in record time, although it entered WWII relatively late, about 1942. With a radical new wing design it was just about the fastest thing in the air. It had the kind of looks that inspired kid's drawings while daydreaming about planes during a boring math class.

Truly fast race cars of the post-war era had the same look. Poised, aggressive, ready to pounce on any lesser machine at speed we had only previously dreamed of attaining. The cars that immediately come to mind are the early C and D type Jaguar race cars of the era. They looked like P-51s without wings. Some of those Jags even had vertical fins behind the driver's cockpit mimicking the vertical stabilizer of an airplane. They were put there for aerodynamic stability when the car was approaching its near top speed of close to two hundred mph. Notice I called the interior of the car the cockpit because that is exactly what it was. Like a fighter plane, it had lots of exposed aluminum, but unlike a fighter one could actually see every rivet of its monocoupe chassis. In fact, there were lots of exposed rivets on the body of those race Jags and they protruded like aluminum pimples versus the flush rivets on the P-51. The P-51 needed flush rivets to help it attain its incredible speed. It almost broke the sound barrier in a steep dive.

Both machines had the best engines available at the time and they were both British designed. The late model P-51 had a Rolls Royce designed, American built, V-12 Packard Merlin power plant. It has been said that the engine was so overpowered that it had a lifespan of fifty hours at full military power. Sadly, it coincided with the lifespan of a wartime Mustang pilot which was also rumored to be about fifty hours of flight time.

The C and D type Jags had a robust, six-cylinder overhead cam engine that was very similar to the motor that Jaguar was using in its passenger cars. All the more impressive and giving credence to the European advertising philosophy, win the race on Sunday, sell on Monday.

The WWII fighter planes were all very interesting machines, as were the post-war race cars. We will never see anything like them again. Vintage aircraft and vintage race cars are priceless collectibles for connoisseurs of aluminum art that just happens to go fast.

Shop 'til You Drop... With Maria Tennariello

Happy New Year 2005! I hope all my readers enjoyed the holiday and New Year. So, let's do some shopping and start the New Year off right!

Starting out on Main Street in Hampton Bays I peeked into Sassafras and found a huge storewide sale on all inventory from 20% to 70% off on select merchandise. There are great rain boots and Ugg coats as well as excellent savings on sale priced selected jewelry. I love the baskets with sale items that include Nudies for $40, Free People sweaters are $50 and custom made cowboy boots from Italy for $195 in red and gray. By the way, Tori, owner of Sassafras, has just opened her new store in Jupiter, Florida with a website on its way next month. Log onto www.sassafrasny.com and get sassafrased!

At Wall St. Bead and Jewelry

I stopped at Wall Street Bead and Jewelry Exchange at 14 Wall Street in downtown Southampton to check out Ellen's 50% off sale on their private jewelry making classes. What a great way to keep yourself busy and spend some quality time on a dreary winter day. The class only costs $15 for an intense half hour lesson in bead stringing, knotting, and wire wrapping. In addition, there is a sale on a large selection of finished one-of-a-kind beaded jewelry priced from 30% to 40% off. They're open everyday (except Tuesday), from noon to 5:30 p.m. Give a call at 631-283-6843 for appointments and information.

Don't pass up the first time winter sale at H Groome located at 9 Main Street in Southampton, where there is something special for everyone. You will love the luxury mink and rabbit throws, pillows, hats, cashmere scarves, hats, gloves, sweaters, slippers and bathrobes this new store has to offer. If you're looking for tabletop, there is an eclectic selection of dinnerware, glassware, napkins, tablecloths, placemats and vases. For the bedroom shopper you will love the sheets, duvet covers and quilts. The merchandise goes on forever here. Get going, everything is flying out the door!

Nearby at Dansk on Main Street where it doesn't matter if you were naughty or nice, there are goodies for everyone at fantastic savings with their "After Christmas Sale" going on right now. Look for a cool 80% off Lenox nativity sets that include "China Jewels" and Nativity Blessing" just to name a few. And their French Bistro cookware, kitchen gadgets, bamboo cutting boards, wooden carving boards, bread trays, trivets, placemats, napkins, table runners, table cloths, children's dinnerware, holiday decorations dinnerware, glassware and Lenox fine china will fit any budget...Get going while the flavor lasts!

While you're in the shopping mood, stop in at Rags at 50 Jobs Lane for their "Half Price Winter Sale" cool ladies clothing and accessories. You will love this shop!

If you're looking for something different for a baby nursery, check out accessories, hand painted children's furnishings, fabrics, trim accessories, down duvets, blankets, pillows and luxurious gift baskets and take a sleigh ride over to Bernadette O'Brien Fabrics & Interiors Ltd. on Hampton Road in Southampton. I hope you find what you need included in her 50% off "Winter Clearance Sale." I did!

Ok, you want to hear the sale of the week? At Bombay in the Bridgehampton Commons there is a 75% off sale on all Christmas and Holiday merchandise that will keep you on a buying spree. The ornaments are dazzling; I bought a few for after holiday gift giving. Shhh... don't tell anyone! The store merchandise is plentiful and should not be missed with up to 50% off. Rose the sales associate told me they get shipments daily and the sale will go on until it is all gone. Get moving on this one, you shouldn't miss it! It's a goodie...

Sag Harbor was next on my agenda...I stopped into D.J. Hart's on Main Street to catch up on her 50% off all clothing sale and found the store packed with fabulous merchandise. There are fashion stopper ladies clothing, hats, scarves, sweaters, coats and much more that are included in this sale. You definitely go into a trance when you look at the jewelry D.J. Hart has filled her cases with (not included in the 50% off sale). If you love brooches, rhinestone hair clips, watches, necklaces, earrings, and more, you will not walk out without buying something here. Trust me on this one...

Next door at Island Surf there is also a 50% off sale that will knock your socks off...Now is the time to gear up for your skiing and winter sport clothing at reduced prices for the entire family. Go for it!

Australian Femininity also on Main Street is having a winter sale with lots to choose from. This is a shop full of unique ladies clothing, hats and accessories that you will find enchanting. Stop in and check this one out...

Until next week. Ciao and Happy Winter Shopping!

If you are having winter sale, know of one or have any shopping questions, please contact me at Dan's Papers via fax: 631-537-3330 or via email at: shoptil@danspapers.com I would love to hear from you.

ART COMMENTARY With Marion Wolberg Weiss

THE ART SCENE:
FAR FROM THE HAMPTONS
Part 1: Local Artists at New York's Nabi Gallery

While Manhattan is not exactly far from the Hamptons, it can be a long way from home, when it's New Year's Eve and you're alone in the City. However, a visit to Chelsea's Nabi Gallery makes it all right: familiar people and a warm, inviting setting.

Not only did Min-Myn and Val Schaffner operate a similar gallery in Sag Harbor for several years, but they also feature local East End artists in the new venue. And the informal, comfortable atmosphere carries over, even though the gallery is located in an area where intensity and formality is the rule rather than the exception.

Nabi's current show is a varied one, presenting both paintings and prints with diverse themes and styles. Nohra Barros (a Sag Harbor resident long associated with her husband's book store, Canio's) has a series of etchings that are new to this critic. Their provocative titles reinforce their thoughtful themes which are both mythic and metaphysical. For example, there's "The Vindication of Time," where a lizard predominates the scene. The question of natural primitive forces is also present in "The Eternal Return," where the old (a man and his camel) challenges the new (a speeding train).

We are most fascinated with Barros' "The Spider's Stratagem," an image juxtaposing a girl with a spider's web. A man in the background runs toward the young lady. The implication is that the insect is the enemy, but we wonder if this is true.

Work by G. Dante

Giglio Dante is another local resident, a well-known painter of creative portraits that are classical works presented in a contemporaneous context. The classical portion (the central image) is treated in a monochromatic manner, while the background captures brighter hues of reds, greens and purples. This produces a special effect, considering that similar works by other artists reverse the process; the background may be less colorful, for example.

While not connected to the Hamptons, Dae-Woong Nam's pieces are intriguing as well, his photorealistic style and narrative thrust quite compelling. The series features a group of people and swimming pools in various configurations. There's a definite surrealistic mood surrounding the images, namely dislocation (one work has a pool in a snow-filled forest; another pool sits high above leafy hills).

Water can suggest purification and goodness as well as a site of danger and even death. Is it too much of a stretch to suggest that the pool is either heaven, hell or perhaps purgatory?

The show is on view until Jan. 29 at 137 W. 25th St. (212-929-6083)

Honoring the Artist: Karl Szekielda

We've all heard the expressions "Science is an art" or even, to a lesser degree, "Art is a science."

This week's cover artist, Karl Szekielda, embodies these sayings to perfection. He is a scientist and an artist, distinguishing himself in the diverse fields. It would probably be difficult for him to choose which discipline he likes the best, so connected is he to both professional pursuits.

Art and science have always exerted parallel influences on Mr. Szekielda. As he puts it, "I started painting when I was very young. But I loved science, too. Art was for excitement. Science was for seriousness."

First, the science afforded Mr. Szekielda a lot of traveling time for research on both the environment and color perception. His work at NASA brought him experience with satellite image analysis, while his position at the United Nations had him establishing labs for studying satellites in developing nations.

An early retirement brought Mr. Szekielda to New York's Hunter College where he wanted to pass on the knowledge he had gained through the years. As a Research Professor, he was able to do just that; he's currently teaching a graduate course titled "International Corporations and Environment."

We're especially interested in what a course like this encompasses. "It's about our energy sources for the future," Mr. Szekielda answers quickly. "There's not a big chance that things will get better in years to come. America has always been the culprit regarding energy alternatives, but India and China are the countries now at fault. There are no global solutions possible."

Even facing such a negative future for the energy crisis, Mr. Szekielda seems a little hopeful, noting, "if the situation becomes dire enough, a solution may be found."

"Art imitates life," we are told, or in this case, "Art imitates science." Mr. Szekielda's cover painting is called "Energy Release" and resembles a flower bouquet, according to the artist. It is not only typical of the modern, abstract style that he uses, but it may also recall the experiments that Mr. Szekielda has developed concerning color encoding (perceptions of color which can not be seen by the human eye). Such research has led to his first art show in New York.

"The exhibit will be called 'Earth Sciences in Abstract Art,' and it's the first time I've used this title for my work," he says. "Viewers will have to put on glasses to see the paintings," he adds with a bit of hesitation. We assure him that spectators will love it.

One thing we are left to question is this: How does Mr. Szekielda manage to do both his art and scientific research, while teaching? It seems easy when he answers, " I believe in compartmentalizing. I decide ahead of time what hours to paint and when I have to teach." (Of course, he does admit that he may take one or two hours to get into the mood to paint.)

Oh, yes. We wonder about one other aspect of Mr. Szekielda's life: How do art and science influence each other? There's the idea of self-discipline, we would imagine. And the concept that the artist uses big canvases, like the grandeur of the universe that he once studied at NASA.

In fact, we might interpret Mr. Szekielda's paintings as capturing the very cosmos itself.

–Marion Wolberg Weiss

Mr. Szekielda's exhibit will be at The German House (871 U.N. Plaza at First Avenue) from May 18- June 6

Entertainment In The Hamptons

theatre review: gem of the ocean...by gordin & christiano

August Wilson's Gem of the Ocean is clearly the best play on Broadway this season and it boggles the mind to think that due to a lack of financial backing, there was talk this richly detailed play might not even make it to the New York stage from Chicago's Goodman Theatre where it debuted. A powerful and articulate achievement, the play is the ninth of Mr. Wilson's ten play cycle, which he began in 1979 to chronicle African American life in the 20th Century. In actuality, Gem of the Ocean becomes the opening work of the cycle.

Wilson has an affinity for his characters and an enjoyment in telling their stories that draws you into the life of the play and holds you there throughout. The intensity with which his people express themselves makes for compelling theatre. All of the plays in the cycle are focused, relevant works and of course Fences (1987) as well as The Piano Lesson (1990) won the Pulitzer Prize. His plays are reminders to black Americans that to forget their past is to lack a clear understanding of their collective journey, and thus to miss their specific challenge.

Phylicia Rashad and Lisagay Hamilton

The latest installment, like the others, is set in the Hill District of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania. The year is 1904 and blacks have been migrating north after their emancipation in search of work and new opportunities. Like many of the immigrants who arrived before them, they are easily exploited and are just learning the price of freedom. Now for the first time we will meet the mythical Aunt Ester (Phylicia Rashad), who heretofore has only been alluded to with great reverence in Two Trains Running and King Hedley II. Aunt Ester is a spiritual advisor for the community and a former slave now 283 years old. We are in the parlor of her home at 1839 Wylie Avenue, which has become a sanctuary for the troubled and down trodden. On a Saturday in the first scene, we are introduced to Black Mary (Lisagay Hamilton), Aunt Ester's housekeeper and protégé, as well as Eli (Eugene Lee), Aunt Ester's gatekeeper, as he turns away Citizen Barlow (John Earl Jelks), a young man from Alabama who, in search of Aunt Ester, has pushed his way into her home with great urgency. Citizen is told by Eli, "This is a peaceful house. You got to come back Tuesday. She don't see nobody till Tuesday."

As the play unfolds we are introduced to the remaining characters: Rutherford Selig (Raynor Scheine) a white traveling peddler, who is a frequent visitor; Solly Two Kings (Anthony Chisholm), an elderly former Underground Railroad conductor and suitor to Aunt Ester, who now sells dog manure to the tanneries; and finally Caesar (Ruben Santiago-Hudson), Black Mary's money obsessed brother, who is the local constable and the play's villain.

Citizen, who decides he can't wait till Tuesday, breaks in through an upstairs window and we learn that he fears he is responsible for a man's death. Aunt Ester takes him under her wing, giving him sanctuary and a job. Sparks fly between him and Black Mary, a proud woman who has renounced her brother's lack of compassion, and a relationship develops. Much of the action takes place off stage, but in this house of peace we have many angry confrontations, recriminations, threats, arrests and even a dead man laid out on Aunt Ester's kitchen table.

In the middle of the evening Aunt Ester will take Citizen on a spiritual journey and her parlor will be transformed into a ship making an ocean voyage to bring slaves to America. Citizen will be taunted by voices from the ship saying, "Remember me, remember me," with a cathartic effect. This transformation will be accomplished without one single special effect, but by the sheer force and nature of superb theatre. An attuned director (Kenny Leon) leads an ensemble of excellent actors into the life of a finely-crafted play, aided and abetted technically by atmospheric lighting (Donald Holder), mood-enhancing sound design (Dan Moses Schreier), wonderful music (Kathryn Bostic), and handsome and fitting costumes by Constanza Romero. That being said, we could quibble that some of the direction is uneven and that we liked some of the actors better than others, but why bother. Everyone will have their own slightly different opinion. Get to the theatre; take the journey and judge for yourself. The facts are riveting and clear. The evening is unforgettable, a poetic and entertaining history lesson that must be seen by any serious fan of the theatre.

Gem of the Ocean is now playing at the Walter Kerr Theatre, 219 West 48th Street between Broadway & Eighth Ave. Tickets are available at the box office or call 212-239-6200.

Barry Gordin & Patrick Christiano are theatre critics. Barry Gordin is an internationally renowned photographer. They can be reached at by6@verizon.net

Guy de Fraumeni's Hollywood In The Hamptons

The Aviator

Youngster Leonardo Di Caprio helped to raise the sinking of an ocean liner sky high. Regrettably, in The Aviator, as tycoon Howard Hughes, he can't lift this movie to Oscar level. He may get one, but the film, as a biographical deliberation, barely gets off the ground – just like the Hughes fiasco, a giant plywood seaplane titled the Spruce Goose. The Aviator is plenty stylishly spruce lookin' but the fat Hollywoody soft-peddling of serious content is awfully loosy-goosey.

The Titanic disaster film that produced that terrible sinking feeling, handily buoyed box office receipts to all-time highs. It also raised Leonardo Di Caprio's box office attractiveness, internationally, to spectacular heights, guaranteeing producers and directors' financial backing to equally spectacular budgets for his star appearance. Riding this huge, swollen wave is Martin Scorsese, renowned for his powerfully small films featuring the flotsam and jetsam of urban turmoil awash with violence. Recently, with Mr. Di Caprio in the lead role, Mr. Scorsese was able to bring his New York street gangs into an over-blown, huge budget Hollywood epic of decidedly ho-hum memorability, in spite of its historical background. How does the old maxim go? Bigger ain't necessarily better.

Once again, with a more mature Leonardo and the deep pockets that come with his jeans, Scorsese has produced another epic-sized movie – a Citizen Kane-like account of the aviation whizkid Howard Hughes who became enamored with Hollywood while producing and directing Hell's Angels, a multi-million dollar film (self-financed, this was 1930) to tell the story of World War I pilots. Their daring, unfettered, airplane-inspired passion reflected Hughes' own reckless fascination with flight. The Aviator's cinematography spectacularly displays the thrill of flying in all its glory.

Equally compelling is the headlong velocity of Hughes' compulsion for success and control and its rewards. Leonardo and Marty work together beautifully, swishing through the exhilarating force of Hughes' boyish thrust of accomplishments that wound up nuzzling on the breasts of Hollywood stars like Katherine Hepburn (Cate Blanchett) and Ava Gardner (Kate Beckinsale). As good as it gets – flying high and lavishly to be as upbeat as possible, Scorsese had to leave the baggage of Hughes weighty psychological and dysfunctional problems on the cutting room floor. Instead, lightweight carry-ons come and go like a Piper Cub distributing pamphlets. For instance, they make much of Hughes' "breast obsession" in his films. My guess is that he was going for box office – like this movie. The dynamic swirl of the first half of The Aviator sputters as Hughes unwinds mentally. That is where the film should take-off dramatically. In its place, Hughes' oncoming dementia is played for laughs and the few scenes meant to convey madness don't work because they don't get down to the bone, let alone, the marrow of the man. Sure, the movie colorfully shows us how Hughes caressed an airplane as he would a woman and at the film's opening as an older boy he is being bathed by his mother – the mammary connection? Or, asking him to spell "quaranteen." The beginning of his germ phobia? Essentially, what should be headed for tragedy goes south for comedy and, more unfortunate – for glitz, popularity and gossipy celebrity-gawking.

Mr. Scorsese should know that Di Caprio's Titanic was a huge success in box office and awards because of its tragic heart wrenching drama. It isn't how high one can fly. It's to what depths one can sink.

Guy Jean de Fraumeni is the producer/writer/director of award winning European and American feature films. He has been a judge at Major Film and TV award competitions, including the Oscars, the Emmy's and various film festivals. He is assisted by Sarah Halsey.

Silvia Lehrer's Cooking Column

After a season of feasting, frolic and more feasting, we welcome a "back-to-the-basics" approach to cooking. We are all familiar with diets and fads. They come and go but eating healthy is here to stay. I have always been a big proponent of vegetables. They may not all fit into a low-carb regimen, but they offer many nutritional and tasty rewards.

Kale, for instance, a variety of cabbage, known to the ancients, is a timely, healthy, low-calorie food. 100 grams (or one-quarter pound) of cooked kale leaves is about 30 calories. The kale commonly seen has ruffled gray-green leaves and rather tough stems. Another variety is the Russian kale with flat, blue-green leaves with slightly less tender stems. The vegetable is particularly rich in vitamin C.

While kale may be avoided by many as too strongly flavored, when combined with the sweetness of carrots kale takes on a pleasantly nutty flavor. Kale is a hearty winter plant and while not popular in Mediterranean countries the robust soup caldo verde (green broth) is something of a national dish in Portugal. In northern European countries, such as Denmark and Germany, kale is pretty much a standard accompaniment with more robust foods such as pork and ham dishes.

Your New Year's resolution might include trying new foods that are good for you. It's not that I don't reach into the cookie jar occasionally, but eating healthy is a recipe for living.

BRAISED KALE AND CARROTS

If you would like to add something different to your winter vegetable repertoire, cook a head of ruffled gray-green kale with shallots and carrots. This deliciously hearty dish developed from "what do I do with that enormous head of kale in my fridge?" It was simply a matter of adaptation and recreating the tried and true for something new.

Serves 4

3/4 – 1-pound head kale
2 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil
2 shallots, finely chopped
2-3 carrots, cut into 1/2-inch dice
Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper
Cold tap water

1. The ribs of kale are very tough and need to be removed from each leaf. To facilitate, stack a few leaves at a time, folding the leaves over lengthwise to expose the stems and the ribs. Run your knife along the length of the ribs, cutting through from the stem to where the ribs narrow at the top of the leaves and discard them. Continue until all are done. Rinse the leaves in a colander, then soak for several minutes to loosen any dirt that may cling to them. Stack the leaves on a cutting board and slice into inch-wide ribbons.

2. Heat the oil in a large skillet (with cover) and put in the shallots and carrots. Sauté for 3-4 minutes, stirring occasionally. Add the kale and stir to mix through the vegetables. Season with salt and pepper, and pour about 1 cup water to barely cover the greens. Cover and cook at a brisk simmer with the lid ajar for about 15 minutes or until kale is tender and liquid evaporates. Taste to adjust seasonings as necessary. Serve warm.

CALDO VERDE

Portuguese Green Soup, classically made with fresh kale, is served as a main course with crusty bread.

Serves 6-8

1- 1 1/2 pounds kales or collards
1 yellow onion, minced fine
1 large clove garlic, minced fine
4 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil
4-5 boiling potatoes, peeled and diced
2 quarts cold water
1/4 pound Chorizo or Spanish sausage, diced
Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper to taste

1. Stack several leaves at a time on a cutting surface, folding the greens onto each other to expose the coarse stems. Cut and discard the stems. Rinse and soak leaves as in previous recipe. Slice the leaves filament thin, and set aside.

2. Warm 3 tablespoons of the oil in a large saucepan and put in the onion and garlic. Sauté for 2-3 minutes, stirring occasionally over medium heat until onion is translucent: do not brown. Add the potatoes and sauté, stirring constantly for 2-3 minutes, just until they begin to color slightly. Add water, cover and cook at a brisk simmer over medium heat for 20-25 minutes until potatoes are soft. Remove the saucepan from the heat and, with a potato masher, mash the potatoes directly in the pan. Add salt and pepper to taste, then add the sausage pieces and cook covered for 5 minutes. Add the greens, and simmer for 5-10 minutes longer. Stir in the remaining tablespoon of oil and taste for salt and pepper.

Here are a few ways to help support the tsunami victims... Gurney's Inn is hosting a benefit to help support Save the Children's Asia earthquake and tidal wave relief fund on Sunday, January 23rd from 5 p.m. to 9 p.m. The evening will include a traditional East End Community supper buffet. Tickets can be purchased at the door for $20/adults and $10/children. 100% of ticket sales will be donated to Save the Children and donations can be made in the form of cash, check, or credit card. For more information about this event or to make a donation please call 668-2660.

Also mark your calendars because on Saturday, January 15th, Nick & Toni's, Rowdy Hall, and Villa Italian Specialties will be donating 10% of the day's total revenue to the Tsunami Relief Fund. Don't miss this chance to help support the effort to help the victims of the tsunami. For further information or reservations please call Nick & Toni's at 324-7001, Rowdy Hall at 324-8731, or Villa Italian Specialties at 324-5110.

Rowdy Hall is now offering discounted movie tickets with your meal. Patrons of Rowdy Hall are entitled to a UA Cinema movie ticket at a cost of $7 per ticket with their meal (valid during lunch and dinner). For more info call 324-8555. Similar dinner and a movie specials can be found at Nick & Toni's in East Hampton and The Plaza Café in Southampton.

Super Sushi Sunday at Pacific East is now every Sunday night. On "Super Sushi Sunday" all sushi is offered at a 50 percent discount. Sample sushi dishes include: Pacific East Roll with Maine lobster, Osetra caviar and shiso, Buddha Roll with soft shell crab, avocado and cucumber and Beach Roll with tempura prawn, asparagus and creamy ponzu. Pacific East is currently open Thursday through Sunday. For further information call 267-7770.

Dishing in the Hamptons... Keri Russell of the WB's Felicity spent New Year's weekend in the Hamptons. She was spotted dining with an unidentified male on Sunday night at Pacific East in Amagansett. They noshed on tuna tartare, rack of lamb, Chilean sea bass and split an apple crumb a la mode.

Pierre's in Bridgehampton will continue its live jazz on Sundays beginning at 6:30 p.m. Peter Weiss will be appearing on January 16th followed by Dennis Raffeloch on January 23rd. Pierre's is now open for dinner seven days a week and brunch and lunch Friday thru Saturday from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. For more information or reservations call 537-5110 or visit them online at http://pierresbridgehampton.com.

INTERIORS & EXTERIORS

The Garden At Rock Cottage by Lance Brilliantine

Largest and Most Bizarre Flower

Virtually every gardener is attracted by unusual, beautiful plants: the hard to grow, the rare, plants that grow in distant climates and are just beyond reach or hard to find! These rare possessions are hoarded and protected like precious jewels. It is interesting to note the number of clubs, associations, and societies that have grown around single, rare species.

I have always been fascinated by unique, tropical vegetation. Oh, I have never wanted to own an "Audrey II," though I am attracted to the small, carnivorous plants that are so odd. But I am most attracted to plants like tree ferns, orchids, and other exotics that produce flowers. To grow these unusual plants is to take horticultural experimentation to a new level!

Not far off from fiction is the most exotic of all blooming plants. It belongs to a family of plants known as the "aroids." The family contains some well-known, familiar species such as philodendrons, caladiums, calla lilies, and anthuriums. This "most exotic" plant in the family is called the "Titan Arum," or Amorphopallus titanum. It is also sometimes called the "Corpse" plant because while in bloom, it produces the smell of carrion. (Some people say the flower smells like the rotting corpse of an elephant. Never having seen or smelled a rotting elephant corpse, I cannot confirm this fact.)

The Titan Arum produces the largest and most spectacular of all flowers. (Actually, the flower is a compound flower called an inflorescence. It contains thousands of individual flowers that are grouped together – both male and female flowers. It is not dissimilar to the flower of a banana tree.) It also grows from the world's largest tuber (often weighing more than 150 pounds). The flower itself can reach heights of greater than seven feet.

This most bizarre flower was discovered in the rainforests of Sumatra in 1878 by the Italian botanist, Dr. Odoardo Beccari. The plant is only found in one location in equatorial Indonesia. It is thought to be the sole remnant of a single living species that grew during the time of dinosaurs.

The few seeds gathered by Dr. Beccari have produced offspring that have continued to be cultivated in the Royal Botanic Gardens in London since about 1895, and in the New York Botanical Garden beginning in 1937. So rare is this flower that there have only been eleven recorded bloomings in the United States.

In addition to its enormous size, this plant has other unusual characteristics. The plant takes about ten years to grow to blooming size – during which time it produces its massive, round, begonia-shaped tuber. During its growth, the plant produces a single, huge leaf that can measure up to 20 feet high and more than 15 feet in diameter. The leaf lives about a year before the plant becomes dormant for a short while. After many seasons of growth, the plant produces its enormous bloom – usually about three weeks after the bud first appears. The bloom lasts only two or

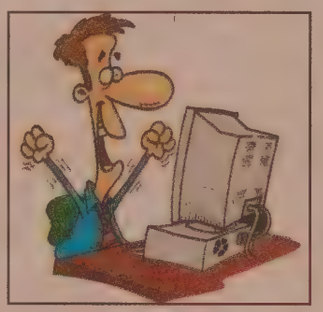
New Year, New You

Feeling those post holiday blues? Put on a few too many pounds lately or just can't bear the idea of getting back to work? Need a change – perhaps you're a little worse for holiday wear? Now that the festivities are long gone and the new year's ahead, perhaps it's time for a new you? Let's face it, there's so much energy and excitement tied up in the coming of the end of a year, but now in a new annum, in 2005...what next? Are you feeling a little let down? How about putting some time and energy into your self over the next 12 months, starting right now? Here are a few things you might want to consider for a new lease on life on a new year.



Hair raising: If you're a brunette, and have always wondered how it would feel to be blonde, give it a whirl, or vice versa – try life on the darker side of life. If you've always fancied a particular hair style, or would just like to embrace a change, cut a groove and reinvent your hair this year. Though be sure to think hard before you take the plunge...try temporary colors if you're not 100% sure, and remember, once you've taken the snip, there's no turning back. Though it will grow back.

Change up: the products you use, from shampoo, to cleansers and moisturizers. We all tend to stick with products that we love and have found work well on our skin and body, but actually, it does us good to change things up sometimes. Our hair and skin can become almost immune to the constant use of one product and so changing them sometimes revives us and can feel fresher for a while...you can always change back in a few months.

Get rid: of old products in your make-up bag...yes, they do have expiration dates. Most products last only two years. Foundation only one year and mascara six months.

Make up: for last year's mishaps and get yourself some new cosmetic colors, ones that speak to 05. The look for this spring is natural cheeks and icy pastels for the eyes, face, and nails. Go pretty and light.

Bag a new you: Getting a fun new accessory can make you feel totally revived and new again, especially if you get something in a fresh, eye catching color which is a very "of the moment" look. A splash of color from a new bag can alter your whole look, plus, there's no trying on to make sure a bag fits, so don't worry about the extra pounds you gained over the holidays. A new bag, is an instant new you for 05.

Smile your way into the new year: Whiten your teeth or even straighten them. Enhance your smile this year and you'll find you use it so much more. If you've always hated that one tooth that persists in being out of line, get some braces...you're never to old for them. Go for it – why not?

Work out your frustrations from 04: Get fitter in 05, but if you're not a "gym" type of person, then take frequent brisk walks along the beach or a hike in the woods this year. Walking is just as effective for general health and well being as hitting the gym five times a week.

Go cold turkey after the holidays: Quit any bad habits. If you smoke, or drink to excess, eat junk food, bite your nails – don't take your makeup off before you go to sleep – (yes, that's you...) whatever your vice, it's time to quit it. I promise you'll feel like a new you if you do.

Book it: Give yourself an overhaul. Make appointments for all your yearly check-ups. Get a physical, got to the dentist, gynecologist and dermatologist. Once you take care of things like this, you'll feel like a new person.

Money talks: Get your finances in order. There's nothing more refreshing and relieving than being financially secure and organized. You don't have to figure it all out today, but at least get a plan of action and stick to it.

three days before it collapses. On the first day the flower opens, it is ready for pollination and releases waves of a carrion-like stench that lasts for about eight hours. The inflorescence contains thousands of true flowers that are hidden inside the base of the central column of the flower. The flower produces a filly-edged leafy structure called a spathe. The unfurled spathe resembles an upturned fluted bell with a dark maroon interior. To me, it looks like a giant calla lily.

The male and female flowers in the inflorescence are separate. The female flowers mature first – usually on the first day. The male flowers mature and release pollen a day later. This ensures cross-pollination. A plant cannot produce seed unless pollen is provided from another plant.

And how lucky I feel to have been able to locate and purchase a single seed of this bizarre plant. What a wonder is the Internet! It now resides in the greenhouse, where it has already set forth its first leaf (now about about a foot tall and wide.) While I do not relish the idea of tending the plant for the next ten years while it matures to flowering size, and am not sure where I will get a second plant to pollinate it, I am intrigued by the process and the challenge.

I am sure this adventure will provide years of interest and fascination as the plant grows. Surely, it will provide food for endless conversation. Stay tuned – as the plant grows, I will be providing updates on progress!

Dry Skin Remedies

Dry hands and cuticles can really be a drag. Lifestyle, profession and weather can play a major part in the condition of your skin. It's important to not let the damage go too far.

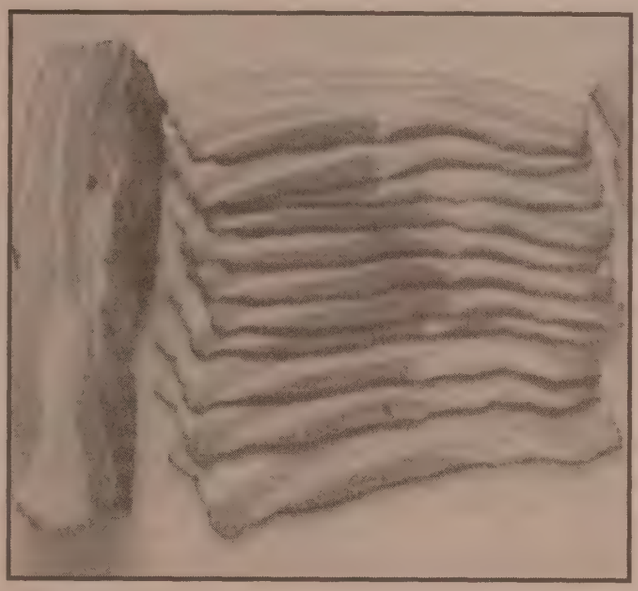
There are many products on the market that claim to cure and heal, but there are also a few simple and easy things you can do at home.

The key is to moisturize as much as possible, but especially before bed. Here's a dry skin remedy for you to try; moisturize your hands before going to sleep by rubbing a strip of raw bacon on your skin and putting on a pair of thin cotton gloves. Sounds a bit strange to me, but according to thriftyfun.com, it works.

Another, better smelling, suggestion is to make a honey paste. For this recipe, you will need a tablespoon of ground almonds, 1 tablespoon of ground oatmeal, zinc oxide paste, honey and one egg yolk. Combine the mixture and rub all over your hands. You will need assistance putting on cotton gloves.

Essential oils are also a great way to soothe and condition your dry hands. There are a wide variety of fragrances that include lavender, rose, and sandalwood, just to name a few. You can make your very own signature moisturizer that can be used all over, simply by adding a few drops of your favorite essential oil to a fragrant-free moisturizer. Most essential oils can be found at any local health store or bath and body shop. In Southampton, check out Natural Foods and in Sag Harbor, Provisions is a great resource.

Aloe and Vitamin E creams are also very effective. And believe it or not, your diet can affect the condition of your skin. www.care2.com, author Earl Mindell suggests eating fish at least twice per week. The oils in fish such as salmon are rich in omega-3 fatty acids, which help replenish lost moisture in dry skin and hair. Flaxseed oil is also a great supplement and so is as Vitamin E. Drink lots of water! Water is always a major ingredient in any healthy diet plus it helps to hydrate the skin.



Both men and women can use any of these remedies. However, the products you buy should differ. We all are aware that women should have soft and supple hands, but why shouldn't men? There are specific lines that cater to men and use slightly different ingredients in their products. You can find an array of men's and women's lines that include Philosophy, Kiel's, YuBe and Lancome. Locally, many of these products can be found at Style Bar in Sag Harbor, Saks Fifth Avenue in Southampton or White's Drug Store in East Hampton.

Caring for your hands, of course, involves growing nails. Many of us like to pamper ourselves with a relaxing manicure from a salon, but for those of us who choose to do it on our own, here are a few tips to follow: 1. Rub oil (preferably almond oil) into your fingertips every night 2. Soak your fingers in milk for several minutes a few times per week (this increases growth) 3. Moisturize and buff your nails regularly 4. And for those nail biters....Stop!!!!

If softer hands are what you're looking for, you must use the best products. According to IVillage.com here are the top ten moisturizers: 1. Neutrogena Norwegian Formula Hand Cream 2. Mary Kay Satin Hands 3. Avon Moisture Therapy Hand Cream 4. L'Occitane Shea Butter Hand Cream 5. Bath & Body Works Healing Hand Cream, 6. Crabtree & Evelyn Gardeners Hand Therapy 7. Aveda and Relief 8. Body Shop Hemp Hand Cream 9. Yves Rocher Arnica Hand Care 10. Burt's Bees Almond Milk Beeswax Hand Cream.

Whether you opt for home remedies or high-end products don't forget to pay attention to the health of your skin. Everyone looks at your hands so why not make them look and feel their best?

Looking at 05 differently: Have you always fantasized about having beautiful baby blues, soft brown doe eyes, or a gorgeous green gaze? Think you're stuck with the boring one you were born with, darn it? And you know you'd get so much more attention if only...well, try a set of colored contact lenses and see how different 05 will look.

If a job's worth doing: Been miserable at work, or have always dreamt of doing something else with the greater part of your every day? Do something about it. Follow your bliss. Look for a job that makes you happier. Remember, we spend the majority of our lives at work. Make that time something to look forward to.

Loving the year: Get rid of any negative relationships and make room for positive ones this year. Not just love matches, but anything that doesn't work for a new, happier you.

Back it up: Last, but not least, back up all your computer files in 05. Because, if you're like me, you'll have to rewrite your first 05 column at the very last minute because you didn't! Oy!!!

Happy New Year.

"Let Me Tell You How I Improved My Looks Naturally"

I hated the way my face looked because of my severe acne scarring. One laser treatment did more for my acne scarring than everything I tried in the past combined!" Salvatore Casciotta, General Contractor, Hampton Bays, NY, Age 58

"My eyes were getting smaller and my eyelids were drooping. After my full face Thermage treatment, I feel like I had a real face lift without the surgery. I was thrilled to see the immediate results and my boyfriend was able to notice an amazing difference in less than 24 hours." Carol Reina, Warranty Administrator, Shirley, NY, Age 49

"My problem areas included my hips and thighs and I feel that my body was disproportionate. The non-invasive mesotherapy treatments allowed me to continue my daily activities. After four treatments I have reduced the size and shape of my lower body. I feel healthier and more confident about my body than every before." Susan Williams, Charter Manager, Hampton Bays, NY Age 35

"Not a week goes by where I don't run into a friend or acquaintance and they ask me what I did to my face because I look so fabulous!" Caryl Zwecker, Retail Manger, Woodbury, NY, Age 43

Real Estates by Diane Strecker

Starting off the New Year with a bang, the East End of Long Island adds to its credit one of the highest priced sales to take place in the Northeast at a record $45 million. The Burnt Point Estate originally listed at $50 million. Its price matched the previously highest, $50 million asking price of The Church Estate in Montauk. Since then, Three Ponds Farm in Bridgehampton surpassed them both starting with an asking price of $70 million. The three mega estates have remained on the market until recently when Burnt Point sold. Not too long ago the Church compound (known to most as the old stomping ground for the rich, royal and famous) lowered its price to $45 million, as had Burnt Point. Burnt Point is located in Wainscott and directly juts out onto Georgica Pond with views of the pond or ocean from almost every room in the house. The home took four years to build and shortly after it was completed, owner David Campbell placed it on the market. The 18,000 sq ft palatial mansion's exterior was designed by famed architect Francis Fleetwood and the interior architecture by Brian O' Keefe. The property is set on an exceptional 25 acres that run along more than 2000 feet of water frontage. There is a private beach and dock with views from three directions. On the property there are two barns, a tennis court with a viewing pavilion, a wine cellar and tasting room, a professional greenhouse, a gym, boathouse and an infinity edged heated pool with a waterfall and whirlpool. You reach the main house via a long winding driveway that insures privacy and seclusion. In the main house is a grand style living room, library, family room and four bedrooms that include a master suite with one of its five fireplaces and his and her dressing rooms. There are 14 bathrooms. A stone gallery leads to the guest house where there are three bedroom suites. The buyer, pharmaceutical giant Stewart Rahr, bought the home just days after first seeing it. The joint brokers to the sale are Prudential Douglas Elliman's Dolly Lenz in New York and from the Bridgehampton office, Paul Brennan

Interior, Burnt Point

For sale in Westhampton Beach on 150 feet of oceanfront and white sand ocean beach is a 4800 sq ft home on one acre. It has 7 bedrooms 6 baths, 2 fireplaces, a heated gunite pool, two saunas, hot tub and cabana area and private maid's quarters. It is listed with Real Hamptons Realty where 5% of all commissions go to the Jay Locket Sears Mission of Kindness Children's Fund.

As the numbers come in for 2004, they are looking pretty good, with strong third quarter sales all over the East End. The Corcoran Group reports the average sales price in Southampton just under two million and the median sales price there close to a million and a half. On the North Fork, Cutchogue ranks highest with average sales in the $800,000 range and on Shelter Island home sales average well over a million. There are still quite a few impressive estates on the market, with Three Ponds Farm still leading the way both by price and amenity. The 60 acre property has three ponds and a golf course to its credit. Goose Creek in Wainscott is available at $24 million, the 21 acre Towerhill, former home of John Lion Gardiner, said to have been built to keep a watchful eye on his family's private island, is available at $22 million. There is a home and 35 acres on the bluffs of Montauk as well as the $45 million Church Estate still waiting for that perfect buyer. If the sale of Burnt Point is any indication of how sales will go in 2005, East End real estate is off to a grand start.

MAGIC TRICK
Dear Dan,

As a child growing up on Long Island, I can vividly remember walking along the beaches of the South Fork and being fascinated with the thunderous roar of the surf pounding the shoreline. Just as the breaking waves commanded my attention, I was provided solace with the almost magical atmosphere of the region. Whether it was Southampton or East Quogue, it didn't make a difference. Both offered a unique type of tranquility that could not be found anywhere else on the island. It's difficult to explain, but the South Fork felt like a safe haven where many of life's problems could be erased by the caressing rhythm of the surf. Although these cherished memories have withstood the test of time, I am disheartened by the course the South Fork has taken.

The abundant spaciousness and calmness, which exemplified the area, is slowly fading. Change is inevitable we are told. That often-overused phrase has more meaning now than ever before. Although I still enjoy visiting the South Fork, its impact continues to lose intensity. Where once stood countless acres of wooded vacant land now stands a vast array of architectural designs. Open unrestricted country roads are now overwhelmed with vehicles occupied by people still searching for that magic. As the South Fork continues to be assaulted with the desires of profit-hungry residential developers, a sense of despair takes hold. The magical attraction that once captivated visitors to the area has weakened and the unique character of the area, although still there, is losing its grip. The South Fork must be protected in order to retain its charm and unique historical background. More vigorous restrictions must be enacted to shelter its magical appeal.

ART OF HISTORY
Dear Dan,

Re. your article, "The Third Jewel" (Dec. 17), I wholeheartedly agree that Shirley Kenny has done great things for Stony Brook University since she became president in 1995, but she was not responsible for appointing me to run the Pollock-Krasner House and Study Center. I'm very flattered that you think she deserves credit, but in fact it was her predecessor, John H. Marburger III, who hired me in 1990 to replace the founding director, Meg Perlman. And it was Terence Netter, then the director of Stony Brook's Staller Center, who recognized the importance of preserving the Pollock-Krasner property and initiated discussions between Dr. Marburger and Lee Krasner that later led to her executors' decision to deed the property to Stony Brook.

I applaud Dr. Kenny's initiative in the effort to reincarnate Southampton College, and I thank you for your favorable comments on the Pollock-Krasner House, which is now open without appointments on Thursday, Friday and Saturday afternoons in June, July and August. I hope you'll come for a visit when the property reopens for the season in May 2005.

Happy New Year.

PAPER AIRPLANE
Dear Dan,

I live in Colorado, but when I come home to Long Island to visit the family I always make sure to stop at the Sound View Restaurant to take a copy of your paper. It makes the plane ride home something to look forward to!

WHERE'S WYBORG?
Dear Dan,

Hi! Just found your website. We love Montauk and go every October to fish, Can you tell me where Wyborg Beach is? I just read about it in this week's Dan's Papers.

Thanks.

Police Blotter

Medley at Murf's, Not On Drink's Menu. It seems two patrons of Murf's, a happening "hot spot" on Division Street in Sag Harbor, rang in the New Year by trying to ring each other's necks. One pickled pugilist was charged with disorderly conduct, a violation, while the other disappeared before police arrived.

Cop Car Caper. What is it they say…"boys will be boys; gotta' let 'em have their toys?" Well, one New Year's rabble-rouser took this to heart when he leapt into a squad car and sped off. Apparently, an officer, responding to a complaint about an overly boisterous house party on Harbor Boulevard in Springs, left his engine running while he investigated. As he was leaving the residence, he saw his car heading in the direction of Springs-Fireplace Road. Town Police Detective Sergeant Chris Anderson told reporters later that "alcohol played a role" in the car caper. As it turns out, a North Main Street resident, who had been at the party when the officer arrived, drove the police vehicle toward the Village. The ride was cut short when the motorist hit a utility pole on Miller Terrace, just off North Main Street. By the time authorities arrived, he had fled the scene. Whether it was his conscience or common sense, the driver turned himself in at police headquarters the next morning. Police reported that damage to the vehicle hovered around $1,000.

"Full Monty" Full-On At Video Store. According to Southampton Police reports, "Tiny Tim," a male about 5'4" and tipping the scales at 150 lbs, burst into an unnamed Hampton Bays video store wearing nothing but his birthday suit and a white cover over his mug. As if his nudity wasn't enough to garner a wee bit of attention, he bellowed "Wahoo!" and then exited the store. The store's security camera did not reveal further information.

"Reefer Madness" Strikes Underage Burnouts. East Hampton Village Police Chief Gerard Larsen told reporters that his department had been advised that high school students were smoking marijuana before class on Ocean Avenue. Following up on the lead, officers arrested two East Hampton High School students who were "tuning up" at 8:00 am in their cars at the disclosed location. Two hours later, another "puffing pair" was similarly spied by authorities. All four were charged with the misdemeanor count of criminal possession of marijuana in the fifth degree and unlawful possession of marijuana, a violation.

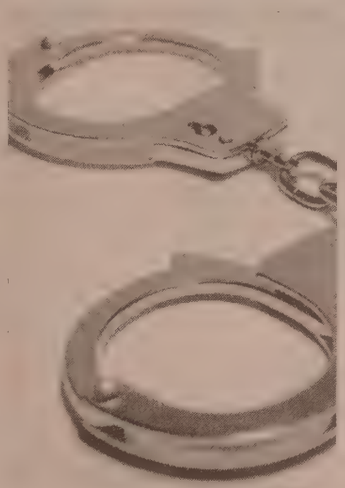
Hooch Heisters Charged in Booze Cruise. It appears two who are old enough to know better, were charged with nabbing nearly a grand's worth of liquor from Amagansett Wines and Spirits, located on Main Street in the hamlet. The men, both 37, entered the store and chose bottles of Johnnie Walker Blue Label, Remy Martin, Hennessey and others, running up a tab of $879. The scam unfolded with one of the men leaving the store under the guise of getting money from his car, and then the second one followed soon after to check on him. The proprietor of the store told police that when neither man returned, he looked over his stock and discovered the missing liquor. After phoning authorities, the owner called other South Fork liquor merchants in the area to alert them. An employee of the Wainscott Wine and Spirits store on Montauk Highway recognized the "booze bandits" when they pulled into the lot about an hour later. Perhaps having second thoughts, the men did not leave their car, but unfortunately for them they were made. The Wainscott Wine and Spirits' staffer called authorities and provided a description of the car. Southampton Town police spotted a vehicle fitting the description and pulled it over on Montauk Highway in Bridgehampton. Several bottles of liquor matching the ones pilfered were allegedly found in the back seat. The men were charged with petty larceny.



Egg Foo Fire! According to East Hampton Police reports, a Springs resident left egg rolls heating on an electric stove as he dashed to the 7-Eleven in Sag Harbor to pick up some chips. The cooking rolls ignited a blaze at his Grant Avenue home, which firefighters were able to extinguish. Guess he had to settle for just chips that night…
